PREFACE

The study, Victimization and Other Risk Factors for Child Maltreatment Among School-Age Parents: A Longitudinal Study, 1988-1992 has been given to the National Data Archive on Child Abuse and Neglect for public distribution by the investigators, Debra Boyer and David Fine. Funding for the project was provided by The National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, under Contract 90-CA-1375.

ABSTRACT

This descriptive longitudinal field study looks at risk factors in the etiology of child abuse and neglect among adolescent parents. The investigators examined sexual victimization prior to pregnancy as a major antecedent factor for child maltreatment. Pregnant and/or parenting adolescents were recruited from ongoing educational and social programs in the state of Washington between October 1988 and 1989. The sample consisted of 535 adolescent females who were 17 years old or younger at the time of their first pregnancy, and 21 years old or younger at the time they completed the survey. Follow-up data for this study were collected on 315 of these females between 1990 and 1991. The survey data describe respondents' demographic characteristics, family background, pregnancies, parenting history, sexual histories, behavioral indicators of sexual victimization, physical maltreatment, and neglect. In addition, data were collected on parenting skills, attitudes, social support, sex roles, and attitudes toward sexual activity. The data allow for examination of the inter-relationship between: 1) childhood sexual abuse, 2) adolescent pregnancy, and 3) child maltreatment by adolescent parents.

The Archive distributes two data files for this study. One file contains the baseline data collected between 1988 and 1989 for all 540 wave one participant. The second data file includes baseline and follow-up data for the 318 women who participated in both waves of the study.

I. STUDY OVERVIEW

Purpose of Study

The purpose of this study was to examine risk factors in the etiology of child abuse and neglect among adolescent parents. The investigators examined sexual and physical victimization prior to pregnancy as major antecedent factors for child maltreatment. The central questions of this research investigation were: 1) What is the relationship between early sexual victimization and child abuse to adolescent pregnancy; and 2) What is the relationship between adolescent parents' physical and sexual victimization to the maltreatment of their children?

Sampling and Selection

Participants were recruited from ongoing educational and social programs in the state of Washington. Sample recruitment focused on sexually active adolescent females who had become pregnant and had delivered or who were pregnant and planned to deliver. The sample did not include women who had never been pregnant, who miscarried, or who terminated their pregnancies. A total of 540 women chose to take part in the survey, but only 535 of these women met the criteria of being 19 years old or younger at the time of their first pregnancy, and 21 years old or younger at the time they completed the survey. The responses of the five women ages 22-25 who took the survey are not included in the investigators analyses but are included in the distributable data file. Follow-up data for this study were collected on 318 women.

For the purposes of this study, the investigators defined sexual abuse to include coercive sexual experiences, child molestation, and rape or attempted rape. To ensure sufficient clinical follow-up for participants who disclosed a history of sexual or physical abuse, the research was conducted through organized programs for pregnant and parenting adolescents. Arrangements were made with state CPS to facilitate the reporting of abuse and the facilitation of services.

Thirty-five program sites in nine counties in the state of Washington participated in the study. There were five rural counties and four with urban populations. The sites included public school alternative programs, human service agencies, and tribal organizations. Twenty five out of the fifty schools in Washington which provided specialized education and service programs for pregnant and parenting adolescents participated. Community programs which participated in the study included: two youth programs sponsored by Planned Parenthood, one church affiliated youth program sponsored by the YMCA, and three programs sponsored by nonprofit youth service agencies. Three Northwest American Indian tribal organizations were also recruited in order to meet project objectives concerning cultural issues in teenage pregnancy and because this group was known to be underrepresented in school based programs in Washington.

Administration of Surveys

Project staff met with potential participants as a group and presented information about the study and the consent forms. At that time, there was a discussion of the survey's questions on abuse history. Members of the project staff discussed why this information was being collected and how confidentiality would be protected. Project staff also discussed the counselor's role. Counselors had special training in sexual victimization and would be available to participants during and immediately following the survey. The counselor was identified as the person who would review the survey data and contact participating individuals if it was felt that the participant or their children were in danger. In general school or program staff did not examine the completed surveys, but were consulted if abuse issues arose. Counselors were introduced to participants and provided participants with information on available resources. Potential participants then had an opportunity to ask questions.

Data Collection

Data were collected at approximately one year intervals in three phases: 1) baseline surveys, 2) follow-up surveys, and 3) review of Child Protective Service case records. In addition, focus group interviews were conducted throughout the research period. The focus group interviews and Child Protective Service case records are not available for dissemination. Data collection for the baseline survey (Teen Parent Survey One) took place between October 1988 and October 1990. Data collection for the follow-up survey (Teen Parent Survey Two) took place between October 1990 and December 1991.

The baseline survey was administered at schools and agencies to groups of 3 to 20 participants. At least two adults from among the research staff, counselors, and teachers were present to answer questions and respond to concerns. Counselors then reviewed surveys and were available at each site during and immediately after the survey for those who required clinical intervention. The survey took between 30 and 90 minutes to complete. The follow-up survey was administered in a similar way. Program or research staff contacted the participants and informed them of the scheduled survey. For women who were no longer in the area, survey questionnaires were mailed. A total of 60 follow-up surveys were completed by mail.

Instruments and Measures

There were two instruments used to collect data. A brief description of each instrument is provided below. The complete instruments are included in Appendices A and B of this document.

Teen Parent Survey One (1989)

This questionnaire was used to elicit participant demographic characteristics, family background, pregnancy and parenting history as well as sexual history and behavioral indicators of sexual victimization, physical maltreatment, and neglect. The questionnaire also included a series of standardized scales which assessed parenting skills, parenting attitudes, social support, sex roles and attitudes toward sexual activity. These items (in section nine of the survey) were adapted from the following sources:

Bavolek, S.J. (1986). The adult-adolescent parenting inventory. Family Development Resources. Eau Claire, WI.

Koss, M. and Oros, L. (1982) Sexual experiences survey: A research instrument investigating sexual aggression and victimization. Journal of Consulting and Clinical Psychology, 50:455-457.

Teen Parent Survey Two (1990)

This questionnaire was used to elicit information about participants' current pregnancy status, recent sexual activity and contraceptive practices, recent victimization, demographics and health status of children, child care and parenting circumstances. The questionnaire also contained items relating to child parent relations, social support and social stress, substance use, health, education and economic status, as well as paternal demographic characteristics and father's involvement with parenting and support.

II. DESCRIPTION OF MACHINE-READABLE FILES

The Archive distributes these data as SAS transport or SPSS portable files. Other file formats can be prepared by special request. Please refer to the NDACAN order form or call us for more information.

File Characteristics

The Archive distributes two files for this study. A brief description of the files is provided below. Frequencies and summary statistics for these files are available from the NDACAN web server.

TPS89

This data file contains data from the “Teen Parent Survey One” questionnaire. There are 540 observations and 436 variables. For detailed information about the variables in this file, please refer to Appendix C: Codebook Information for TPS89.

TPSMRG

This data file contains data from both the “Teen Parent Survey One, 1989” and “Teen Parent Survey Two, 1990” questionnaires. There are 318 observations and 864 variables. For detailed information about the variables in this file, please refer to Appendix D: Codebook Information for TPSMRG.

Notes Regarding the Data Files

1) Five cases in the TPS89data file contain information for women who are over 21 years of age. The principal investigators did not include these cases in their published results. All publications refer to a sample of 535. To replicate findings of the principal investigators omit the cases pertaining to those over 21 years of age (ID1 = 188, 308, 465, 468, 507).

2) In the TPS89 dataset, there are two ID numbers (variable name ID1) which occur twice: 144 and 147. For both IDs, the data values on the record pairs are NOT identical, so we have not deleted any of the four cases. It is not known whether these are actually four different respondents. Users should consider deleting these cases before performing analyses.

3) Three of the cases in the TPSMRGdata file that contain information for women who are over 22 years of age. The principal investigators do not include these cases in their published results (n=315). To replicate findings of the principal investigators omit the cases pertaining to those over 22 years of age (ID1 = 308, 468, 501).

4) There are 7 cases in the merged file, TPSMRG, with ID1 values that do not appear in the Survey One file, TPS89. These ID1 values are 31, 62, 250, 481, 483, 498, and 509. Users should consider eliminating these cases from their analyses.

5) A few data values were recoded by the principal investigators for the purposes of creating their published tables. For this reason, attempts to duplicate the published tables from Archive data may not be possible. (The discrepancies, however, will be minor). Unfortunately, we do not have documentation for these recodes.

6) Users should note that there are many YES/NO variables in the data set, but that some are coded as 0/1 and others as 1/2. Check the codebook to be certain of the coding scheme for any particular variable.

7) Beware of variables such as DIFMENM, which are coded in a non-intuitive way (i.e., 1='none'; 2='one'; 3='two'; 4='three'; etc.).

8) Be aware that, for some variables, missing values are coded with numbers (e.g., 0, 8, 9, 88, 99), while other variables have missing values coded as system missing. Users will need to recode numeric missing values to system missing values before performing arithmetic operations.

9) We found a small number of out-of-range values for many variables in both the TPS89 and TPSMRG datasets. These have been recoded to system missing values.

Please contact the Archive directly if you have questions or encounter problems in using this dataset. Do not contact the principal investigator. The Archive has made an agreement with the investigator to field all questions related to the study.

SECTION 5

THESE NEXT QUESTIONS ARE ABOUT EXPERIENCES WITH ATTEMPTED RAPE. ATTEMPTED RAPE IS WHEN SOMEONE TRIES TO FORCE YOU TO HAVE SEXUAL INTERCOURSE, BUT FOR SOME REASON IT DOESN'T HAPPEN.

66. Has a man ever tried to have sexual intercourse with you when you didn't want to by threatening to use physical force or violence? 1 - No 2 - Yes (5)
